

Environmental Silver Award for St Mary's Scottish Episcopal Church Ullapool from Eco-Congregation Scotland

St Mary's Scottish Episcopal Church Ullapool has been awarded a Silver Award from Eco-Congregation Scotland. The award reflects the active participation by members of the congregation in their care for God's creation in the areas of spiritual living, that is making the link between environmental issues and the Christian faith; in practical living, by taking practical action in the church and home to reduce our environmental impact, and in global living, by influencing attitudes and action in the local community on issues like climate change. An example of the latter is the church's continuing support for The Green Screen, that regularly screens films on environmental and global justice matters. While The Green Screen was initiated by the church, it has benefitted from the support of other non-faith groups in our community who share its values. The award is in recognition that St Mary's church reflects these values regularly in the life of the church and in its worship, but the award is also for all in our community who take action on issues around climate change, global justice and who care for our natural environment.
